Buchanan. The following letter was sent from C. S. Lewis to his wife on December 3rd, 1945, after his return to Cambridge from overseas duty with the Army. This letter was written to pass the time and to start a discussion of the state of the world now that the war was over. There is a certain sense of anticipation in the letter, as the author looks forward to the issues that will occupy his thoughts and that will lie ahead for his family. C. S.
